

Presidents and Crashed Flying Saucers

Written by Grant Cameron
Sunday, 09 August 2009 02:20 -

The White House Role in Crashed UFO Retrievals

From a paper presented in at the Crashed Retrieval Conference

Las Vegas November 16, 2003

GRAHAM

"Kindly take us to your President!"

Presidents and Crashed Flying Saucers

Written by Grant Cameron
Sunday, 09 August 2009 02:20 -

Before considering the available evidence about crashed saucer material and the White House, it is important to view why the role of the president is so important.

It has long been rumored that the real hard evidence such as crash retrieval materials are in the hands of the military. The president is the civilian head of the military, and thus should be receiving on his desk the best material that has been gathered by the military.

If the critical crash material is not held by the military, but by some agency of the government such as the National Security Agency or CIA, the president should still receive the best available material, as he is the head of the Executive branch that employs most employees of the government.

Most importantly, it is important to view the role of the president in any review of crashed saucer evidence, because the president is the ultimate authority. Only when the president stands up and says, "Some UFOs are not of this world" will the cover-up end. The president's word is final and cannot be overruled. It is therefore important to see what he knows on the subject, or at least what statements or actions he has taken.

Many believe that once elected, the president is suddenly spoken to by God and suddenly knows everything there is about the ultimate UFO evidence such as crashes. This is quite far from the truth. Once sworn in a president is dependant on cabinet officers to present to him any information he might obtain. All the information from the past administration has been removed and the filing cabinets are empty.

An example is President Clinton, who at the time of his 1993 inauguration, was faced with 17,000 classified documents a day being written within the U.S. government. People who think he has time to read these documents, and maintain a 16-hour grueling daily schedule of meetings, briefing, photos, state dinners, and in Bill Clinton's case dating interns, are misled.

The president's knowledge comes from short briefings he gets from subordinates about things they think are important for him to know. The president's knowledge is therefore dependent on the ability of those below him to gather up the facts for him.

Presidents and Crashed Flying Saucers

Written by Grant Cameron
Sunday, 09 August 2009 02:20 -

With this as background, the following are some of the stories that look at what the president might have known about the subject of crashed saucers. These few examples I have chosen, are the result of attempts to track down rumored stories, and investigate them with interviews and material from the various presidential libraries.

The following presidential stories show at times the president knows, and at time doesn't know. Summing it all up I would say that the president is told, but that the level of knowledge is not as great as the stories that have been leaked into the UFO community by U.S. intelligence. The aliens are still in control.

I think the evidence shows that the president knows the reality of the phenomena, but realizes that the government has very little control over the situation, especially when it comes to the phenomena of abductions and cattle mutilations. It is this ignorance and lack of control, which has led to a continued cover-up, while officials scramble to get better information about how to deal with these phenomena.

Our knowledge of the White House role and knowledge has been limited by two factors,

1. The lack of records in presidential libraries.
2. The president has only faced the UFO question twice during a news conference in 55 years.

Franklin D. Roosevelt

The only story that I will deal with regarding FDR is a story that is being worked on by CUFOS and the Ohio MUFON people. It involves the longest servicing State Secretary in US history Cordell Hull. Hull won the Nobel Peace Prize for the work he did towards the creation of the United Nations.

He is one of three Nobel Peace Prize winners who have been involved in UFOs. The other two are Jimmy Carter, and former Canadian Prime Minister Lester Pearson.

Presidents and Crashed Flying Saucers

Written by Grant Cameron

Sunday, 09 August 2009 02:20 -

Hull's story is this. The daughter of his cousin, Reverend Turner Hamilton Holt, came forward a few years back to tell a story of an incident that had occurred in Washington DC in 1939. According to what the Reverend told the family his cousin Cordell Hull had taken him to the sub-basement of the Capitol building during a visit to Washington. There he viewed 1) Four large glass jars holding 4 creatures and 2) A wrecked round craft of some kind nearby.

No other supporting evidence is yet available, but MUFON Ohio is still working on it.

Harry S Truman

Presidents and Crashed Flying Saucers

Written by Grant Cameron
Sunday, 09 August 2009 02:20 -

Presidents and Crashed Flying Saucers

Written by Grant Cameron
Sunday, 09 August 2009 02:20 -

K
♠

George H. W. Bush
former President

Former CIA Director
Rumored Visitor to Area 51
Carlyle Group Board Member

♥
K

Presidents and Crashed Flying Saucers

Written by Grant Cameron
Sunday, 09 August 2009 02:20 -

Frank Carlucci
Military Businessman

Procurer of new weapons (81-83)
Reagan Nat'l Security Advisor
Secretary of Defense
Member/Chair Carlyle Group
Board of many Think Tanks

