BKGB Chairman Yuriy Zhadobin on why his organization no longer investigates paranormal phenomena:

"Unlike during the USSR, the department is not engaged in studying paranormal phenomena. [Back then,] we had greater means and opportunities which we could spend on anything and everything.

Today the situation is different. Then, when society was excited by something, it entered our sphere of interest. But when it comes to healers, UFOs and such, we just can't deal with them any more."

14) Chief Cabinet Secretary Machimura: UFOs definitely exist, unhappy with government's formal response

SANKEI (Page 5) (Full)

December 19, 2007

Chief Cabinet Secretary Nobutaka Machimura stated in a press conference yesterday: "I am sure that unidentified flying objects exist." He elaborated: "Otherwise, it is impossible to explain the Nazca Lines (in Peru, which some believe were created by aliens), isn't it?"

The government yesterday adopted in a cabinet meeting an official response to a question by Ryuji Yamada, a Democratic Party of Japan member. The statement says that the government has not confirmed the existence of UFOs. It was the first time for the government to deny the existence of UFOs.

Machimura, while stressing that it was his personal view that UFOs exist, said: "The government has offered only a boilerplate response in its formal statement."

and UFO "kidnapping victim" Eric Julien, director of the Ufological Research Center. Julian claimed he had received information psychically that a comet fragment would crash into the Atlantic Ocean on May 25, 2006, and cause a giant tsunami. He asserted that the waves would be up to 200 meters high and impact all countries bordering the Atlantic.

In Morocco, Julien's forecast was taken so seriously that the head of the Moroccan Meteorological office, Mustapha Janah made an official statement to the Moroccan press denying the possibility of the tsunami and quoting "NASA" officials who noted that the comet in question would be approximately ten million kilometers away when it passed the earth.

As yet, we have been unable to find these documents on the regular Wikileaks site. However, we feel it safe to say that they may well be genuine considering the tone and content therein.
